with which the shopping public already has become familiar, there are a numher of new ones, some of which will prove innovations to the Capital City First comes the bage auditorium, which is situated on the seventh floor of the F street building. This room is in F street building. This room is in reality a miniature theater. It has a seating capacity of 750, a little stage, several dressing rooms and a tiny gallery. The seats are removable, so that the room may be used for social gatherings, as well as entertainments of vari-ous sorts that the management will provide for its employes and the general public. Near this are the cold stor-age department, the telephone exchange, the employes' rest and writing rooms, a fully equipped dispensary and hospital, with a doctor and a trained nurse n attendance, and the employes school instruction. A distinct innovation is the silence room, which is situated near the dispensary. This room is fitted with soft couches, and sound proof walls and doors keep out all noise. It is intended or the use of the employes.

Another innovation is in the form of model playroom for children. Merry-o-rounds, see-saws and other mechancal toys are provided for the little peo ble who come to the store to shop with heir mothers. The toy department is ooking forward to its annual holiday opening, which is to take place within a few days. to the third floor gives this department added space, and its separation from the women's wady-to-wear department marks another step in the advance-ment of specializing in the service of the store. It is a complete "little shop," wherein shopping is a delight. A gal-lery for the exclusive display of of paintings has been added to the art de paintings has been added to the art de-partment, and entirely new fixtures have replaced the old ones. There is an enlarged rug store, with a special sec-tion for the display of Oriental rugs, and numerous changes have been made in the uphoistery section, large new display rooms having been built, which will be furnished to reveal various dec-orations which this department carries, and offer manifold suggestions for pro-ducing elegant results in the home. ducing elegant results in the home.

The millinery department has been removed to the F street front of the third floor. A French room is adjacent to the main sales room, and tiny little mirror-lined parlors have been provided for the women customers. The millimity section is the last word in elegance and correctness of detail and arrange-

The Liberty department, a collection of all goods made by the Liberty Society, occupies a large space on the second floor of the G street building. Here the famous fabrics, wares and materials of various kinds are plentifully exhibited, in the same exclusive style as their maracter indicates. The Woodward & Lothrop steer is the only Washington seen of the Liberty organization.

The new fitting rooms close to the nomen's gown and suit department are to be fitted up luxuriously, and with every convenience for wonten who come to the store for second fittings.

The shoe department has been entered and correct styles in day and evening footwear are to be found in this section.

Miss May Robson will come to the Columbia Theater with a new comedy, "Mrs. Mat Plummer," by James Forbes, beginning Monday next, with a popular matinee Saturday.

Miss Robson has proved a genius for the expression of humor and eccentricity, through her characterization of an old mother who, all her life, has been accustomed to country ways. On going to New York city to live, she discards her old-fashioned ways and ill-fitting clothes, that she may appear to the best advantage for the sake of her dearly beloved son.
